WRITING : 3/19/2003

People who like red are not limited to the following reasons: 1. Sunrise and sunset usually give beautiful reddish color in the sky. 2. Red flowers look more impressive. 3. Red blood is essential to human lives. Thus a red color gives an association of warm, vividness, and liveliness to the human being. 4. In the color spectrum, red has the longest wave length, thus it is most striking the human visual sense. Red color is widely used for signal signs. 6. Human lips are reddish and appealing especially those of the ladies, Red is mostly used for cosmetics. Lip sticks make women more charming.

Actually all colors have their realm of favorand usage depending upon the specific environment and objective in application. Interior walls are generally white or butter color, furniture in chestnut brown, the inside of cooking utensils mostly black, roof tops red or gray..... The colors of human dressings are widely different and adopted depending upon the gender, profession, age, religions, season and fashion design customs. One interesting Chinese custom is that white is used to denote and decorate the funeral rite while the Western custom is to use black. In China bright red is used to mark or decorate the lucky occasions and celebrations. Yellow had been the royal color for all the dynasties in China for thousands of years, probably because the Chinese race is yellow, and the huge piece of land to the northwest where the race was originated had been mostly a yellowish desert.

Beside the above general reflective considerations, let me put my personal favorite color in the final to be light reddish purple. Don't ask me why. I just like it most.
