WRITING, 3/27/2002

The scene was not a police station but a freeway road side, near the Atilantic City, New Jersey. It was a winter morning about 20 years ago, when a young Asian- American (Douglas) about 30 years old stood talking with a road patro cop (Paul) for about ten minutes then another patrol cop (John) jointed. A few steps away on the road side a car was parked in which sat an old gentleman (Seymour), silent and dignified, father of the young man. Those two Asians were evident traffic offenders because the car was running a zigzag driving and caused unusual hissing noise which are clearly noticed by the patrolling cop and the warning signal stopped the car.

Suspect (Douglas) : My father came from Taiwan just finished a meeting in Atilantic City. He admired the beautiful freeway pavement construction of this country asked me to let him drive a short distance since there was no traffic on the road. He was not used to the power brake of the car , that caused the ulnusual driging."

1st cop(Paul): " Let me see his driving license."

Douglas: He doesn't have an international driving licence. Doesn't bring his home driver licence with him either. He only has a passport with him."

Paul: "My God. How could he drive without a driving licence? How could you let him drive your car with no licence? He would be put in jail according to the law."

Douglas (scared): "My father cannot stay here long. He has very important business in his home office. Is there any possible way to let him go home?"

Paul: "No way. You will have to see the court ."

At that moment, another cop's car stopped at the roadside and the cop (John) was coming to joined the talk. After the first said few words to the second, who glanced over the old man in the Ausmobile, pull the first aside and talked a while. One of the them said to the two offenders "Luck good guys. Go"
